STEP 1 – MALTING

Malted barley is a key component of whiskey

File Type PDF

The Art Of

Distilling. Malted
barley is produced by steeping raw barley in warm water for 40-60
hours at a temperature of 12-15 degrees in order to make the barley think it is spring time in its natural life cycle and the barley begins to germinate.

It is the objective of the distiller to produce a whisky whose flavour and character remain consistent at all times and in all circumstances.

This is the true art of distilling, acquired only after many years and often handed down from one generation to the next.
